Gas, postal rates may rise; interest decrease

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gasoline prices probably will increase this week and postal rates may soon follow, but there is growing evidence the country's high interest rates may be about to start down.

Leading to this speculation on interest rates was a decline Monday of more than a full percentage point in the interest of U. S. Treasury bills, which have been favored by many investors in recent months because of their high yields.

Edward M. Roob, an assistant secretary of the Treasury, attributed the decline to a feeling that the Federal Reserve Board may be easing the tight credit policy it has followed since early this year in an attempt to control inflation.

If federal credit policy is easing, it would result in lower interest rates on virtually all kinds of loans, ranging from home mortgages, to consumer loans, to bank loans for big business.

In other economic developments Monday:

— The Cost of Living Council said it would make every effort to meet a request from President Nixon that it allow gasoline prices to increase this week instead of next, as the council originally had proposed.

Council sources indicated the retail price of gasoline would be allowed to increase by one or two cents per gallon to reflect higher wholesale costs.

— Postmaster Gen. E. T. Klassen proposed a two-cent increase in the cost of airmail and first class postage, meaning an airmail stamp would increase from 11 cents to 13 cents and a first-class stamp from eight cents to 10 cents.

"The cost-price squeeze has affected us as much as it has affected the rest of the economy....Taxpayers are going to have to pay the price," Klassen said. Congress would have to approve the increases, which would also apply to other classes of mail.

— The head of the Office of Revenue Sharing said that revenue-sharing payments to states and local governments are helping to ease the property tax burden in many parts of the country.

The Treasury Department announced Monday that the interest rate on its regular weekly issue of 13-week bills declined to 7.331 per cent Monday, down from 8.786 per cent a week earlier. It was the lowest rate since June 25.

'Forgotten' New Madrid sets suspect registration date

A 19-year-old Illinois youth, placed in jail Sept. 17 and then forgotten about for a week, was ordered released today in Magistrate Court by Judge Lloyd Briggs.

Harold Drake Evans of Freeburg, Ill., was taken to the Scott County Jail in Benton on Sept. 17 by a highway patrol officer who apparently did not notify Prosecuting Attorney Jim Moore that Evans was in jail.

Moore said he did not learn about the youth being in jail until 5 p.m. Monday. Evans had been arrested in New Madrid for stealing bicycles from Sikeston.

Moore filed theft charges against Evans today, but Judge Briggs dismissed the charges because Evans had been jailed and forgotten about.

In another case presented today in the Sikeston courtroom, a preliminary hearing was set on Oct. 9 for Wyley R. Kimbrough of Divernon, Ill., charged with stealing two television sets from El Carpi Motel on North Main Street. The case of a second person involved in the alleged theft, Demetra A. Baker of Divernon, was continued indefinitely.

A preliminary hearing was set on Oct. 16 for Frances Sue McCune, 342 Magnolia Drive, accused of stealing

NEW MADRID — Nov. 1 has been set as the tentative date to begin registering New Madrid County voters under the new statewide mandatory voter registration law which becomes effective Friday, according to Deputy County Clerk Jimmy W. Farrenburg.

Farrenburg said the start of voter registration was delayed because the new law requires the County Clerk to change certain township boundary lines and establish additional precincts.

The new law requires that every voter must be registered before voting in any election in the state and that each voter must vote in the precinct in which the voter lives.

An added factor in the delay is a shortage of necessary supplies. Farrenburg said the demand for supplies by the other 75 counties in the state which are instituting voter registration under the new law, coupled with a paper shortage has resulted in a backlog for forms from printers.

A schedule listing the date, time and places for registering voters throughout the county will be announced by the county clerk's office upon completion of the changes in township boundaries and the designation of additional precincts.

Farrenburg said all voters will have ample opportunity to register, and if necessary, voter registration sites will be kept open at night for the convenience of those unable to register during the day.

He also said that after registration begins, a voter may register at the county clerk's office in the New Madrid County Courthouse any time during regular office hours.

Application leads to arrest

Joseph Allen Clark, 27, of 322 Edmondson St. was arrested Monday after he tried to join the Sikeston Auxiliary police unit.

The arrest came after police ran a routine check on Clark through the police department computer network and discovered he was wanted by Butler County authorities for removing mortgaged property.

He was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Gerald Inman and auxiliary policeman Leroy Parmenter and taken to the city jail to await transfer to Butler County.

Officials cover girl's body

Body identified as Malden girl, 16

PARMA — New Madrid County law enforcement officials have identified the partially clothed, decomposed body found Monday morning by a fisherman seven miles west of this community as 16-year-old Linda Sue Adams Coulson of Malden.

The body was discovered at 8:30 a.m. Monday by William Hill of Malden, who reportedly was looking for a good fishing spot on what is called two ditch.

Authorities reportedly believe that the body had been dumped three or four weeks ago at the site and one-half miles off Route D in western New Madrid County.

Criminal investigation officers of the Missouri State Highway Patrol, New Madrid County officers and the Dunklin County Sheriff's department have joined the investigation.

Deputy Flip Dees, chief criminal investigator for New Madrid County, reported early today that the investigation continued through the night and that a suspect has been taken into custody.

The victim, who was identified by dental records and her clothing, was discovered missing by the Malden Police Department about seven to 10 days ago when it was asked to pick her up for New Madrid County authorities when she failed to appear in Juvenile Court as scheduled.

Malden Police Chief Woody McMillan reported that Mrs. Coulson's mother, Mrs. Paulene Adams, stated that she hadn't seen her daughter for at least two weeks prior to the police inquiry.

Mrs. Coulson was among a group of persons arrested for a break-in at Gideon in August and was reportedly not seen after her release from jail.

New Madrid County coroner Gene Clayton reported today that the cause of her death has not been determined.

The body is at Richards Funeral Home in New Madrid.

Law funding stopped

BENTON — Presiding Judge Les Lankford disclosed to the Scott County Court Monday that a letter received from the Boothele Regional Planning Commission and Economic Development Council indicated that further funds from the Missouri Law Enforcement Assistance Council for supplementing salaries of law enforcement officers have been discontinued. This was disclosed in a meeting of the court Monday.

The letter stated that funding for all law enforcement assistance projects will be stopped.

The letter urged the County Court to write state legislators and Gov. Christopher Bond to make any objections about discontinuance of salary supplements.

The court then decided to protest and made plans to contact Theodore McNeil of Jefferson City, chairman of the police committee of the Missouri Law Enforcement Assistance Council, and Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, chairman of the Missouri Law Enforcement Assistance

The County Court also met with Warren Manning, inspector of the Scott County Health Department, who told the court that any burning at the landfill site north of Morley was in violation of the law.

The court has received several complaints about burning there and the county judges stated that anyone caught burning trash at the landfill site would be subject to a fine and the case would be turned over to the Scott County prosecuting attorney's office.

Officials to attend meet

Three members of the Sikeston City Council will join more than 500 local government officials from over 100 Missouri communities at the Missouri Municipal League's 39th annual conference Wednesday through Friday in Kansas City.

Councilmen attending from Sikeston will be Mayor Frank Ferrell, E. E. "Chuck" Grant and Don Fulton.

The delegates will examine changing local, state and federal relationships and community and regional development techniques.

"The problems we will be examining at the conference affect communities regardless of size," Independence Mayor Phil K. Weeks, president of the league, said. "Local government officials attending the conference will learn much to help improve their communities from the speakers, round-table discussions and in talking with each other."

Speakers at the conference will include Missouri 5th District

Congressmen Richard Bolling, San Diego, Calif., Mayor Pete Wilson; Philip J. Rutledge, policy analysis director for the National League of Cities; Elmer E. Smith, regional administrator for the Department of Housing and Urban Development in Kansas City; and James R. Spradling, Missouri director of revenue.

AUTUMN FIRES

Red leaves on the swamp maples told us autumn was coming. They gave the advance warning, but it takes a little more time for the spectacular coloring that means bonfires on the hills and in the valley woodlands.

Fall is a special time of year. Nights are crisp and in the mornings lowland mists rise like steam from giant kettles. By midafternoon on a mellow, blue-sky day, the countryside resembles an Oriental rug with its mixture of hues.

The colors we see are not due to frosts. They are the result of chlorophyll draining from the leaves; but the technicalities are not important when one enjoys the beauty of the countryside.

One can feel the maturing of year. Wildlife hurries its preparation for winter; late flocks of birds straggle through on their way south. Chickadees begin to come around the farmstead and blue jays bugle as they flash above the orchard. There is a heady fragrance of ripeness on the land as the sun climbs its lowering trail.

Time is tapping autumn's shoulder and soon the land will enter its rest period. But for a poignant period, the fires burn and glory blesses the land.

Then there's the lady who named her parakeet "Watergate" because it took 18 months to make him talk and now won't shut up.

"Everyone's standing in his community is a little better than he deserves. Every man who fails, and carries down others in his wreck, has been given more credit than he deserves.

A woman doesn't think a gift she makes amounts to anything unless she has to sit up all night to finish it in time.

Children are often scolded because they do not know how to behave, but this is not surprising in children when it is remembered that very many grown people do not know how to behave themselves. Were you ever in a crowd that you were disgusted with the actions of a lot of grown people who were trying to act smart? People who use extra efforts to attract attention to themselves are condemned as rude, and are not praised as smart.

NEW YORK (AP) — Man is the only animal that consistently gets into trouble by opening his mouth.

Most creatures open their mouths chiefly to admit food. Man opens his mostly to make a fool of himself. He also must have the most insensitive oral orifice on earth, for man is the only known species that can put his foot in his mouth without even being aware of it.

When his big trap does lead him into one, he defends himself by claiming that he has the right to free speech. What he doesn't realize is that, aside from free love, free speech is perhaps the most disillusioningly expensive thing in the world.

It isn't necessary to button up your lips, however, to stay out of trouble. All you have to do is to learn to think before you speak, and say thing that will stir up anger in your fellow man - or make yourself an unwilling victim of him.

Here, for example, are a few classic remarks to avoid, remarks that probably have caused more than half the trouble on earth:

"Doesn't anybody around here ever do any work except me?"

"If you want my advice, I think you should —"

"Put your money where your mouth is."

"Why don't we just step outside and settle this man to man?"

"If you only had brains in all your thumbs, you'd be a real genius."

"Can't you ever do anything right?"

"Bring anybody and everybody to the party. We're having open house."

"Shall I tell you to your face what even your friends are saying behind your back?"

"If nobody else will, I'll volunteer."

"Yeah, it's a good joke, but it sounded funnier the way Milton Berle used to tell it 20 years ago."

"No, it's your turn. I distinctly remember buying the last round."

"Yes, it sounds like you were in the right — but of course I haven't heard the other guy's side of the story."

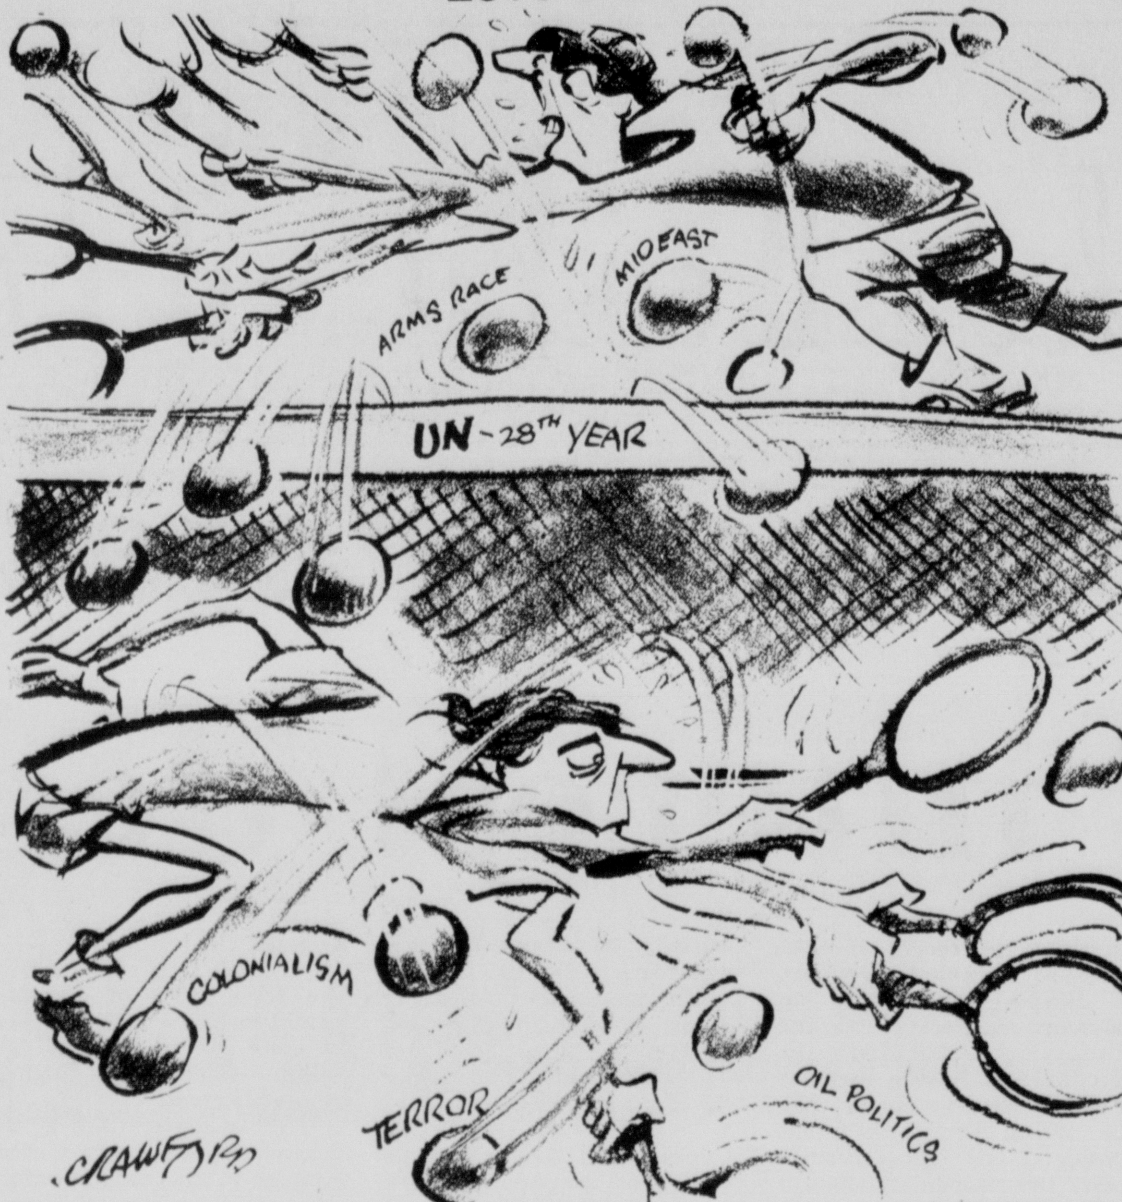

"What puzzles me is why no woman will ever admit she is in the wrong."

"If I didn't love you, do you think I'd be working myself into an early grave so you and the kids can buy the thing you want but don't need?"

"When are you going to start your diet again?"

"If I can be of any further help, don't hesitate to call on me."

END TO WAGE-PRICE CONTROL URGED TO HELP CONSUMER
"Wage and price controls have failed to check inflation, have caused shortages of consumer goods and services, and should be completely terminated," Burt F. Raynes, chairman of the board of the National Association of Manufacturers, said in a statement.
"The manufacturers of this country are eager to get on with their job of providing the public with needed products and services in order to help our nation meet its economic and social goals. Controls are not only a distraction from that essential task, they have become a serious obstacle to its achievement," Mr. Raynes added. He pointed out that shortages of essential materials have already become evident, and will become more so if controls are continued.
Mr. Raynes' statement was made in announcing a NAM policy position, adopted unanimously by its board of directors, declaring the manufacturers' conviction that an end to wage and price controls will be in the best interest of consumers.

The NAM chairman explained that in taking this position the Association recognized that a process of economic education was necessary in ending controls. "We believe that consumers are beginning to learn that controls create shortages of essential products and do not serve their true interests. The NAM will devote its efforts to rallying public support for administration action to terminate the control program.
"Controls give a false sense of security against inflation," Mr. Raynes pointed out. "The most important thing to be done in curbing inflation is to control the growth in federal spending — which has increased over the last 25 years at a rate of four times that of the cost of living. We might have made progress toward that objective if it had not been for the false impressions that we would be safe from inflation behind a Maginot Line of wage-price controls."

The NAM chairman also emphasized that the U. S. cannot isolate itself from the international scene and world trade developments which seriously limit the effectiveness of domestic wage and price controls. "The U. S. control administrators cannot reach beyond our borders to control prices of goods originating aboard, or of U. S. goods sold in foreign markets. If we keep domestic prices of exportable goods too low, they will become unavailable in our own market."

Mr. Raynes further maintained that no benefits are to be gained from any delay in removing controls. "In fact," he said, "the longer controls are continued, the more shortages and distortions will accumulate to trouble us later.
"The best way to end controls is on an all-at-once basis," Mr. Raynes said. "An industry — by industry — phaseout would create more problems than it solves. It would be impossible to maintain an equitable and workable program with the economy half controlled and half uncontrolled. A step-by-step phaseout distorts market behavior as buyers and sellers act in anticipation of the next step," Mr. Raynes concluded.

SECOND THOUGHTS ABOUT CHINA TRADE

The vast majority of Americans favor more trade and diplomatic contacts with China, if a recent survey can be projected to the population at large.

According to David J. Mahoney, president and chairman of Norton Simon, Inc., a public opinion survey covering all 50 states, commissioned by his company, disclosed that:

— About 84 per cent of all those questioned favor increased diplomatic relations with the Chinese government.

— Some 72 per cent favor increased trade with the Chinese, and more than half favor legislation removing obstacles from Chinese imports.

The latter numbers, Mahoney told a Commonwealth Club of California audience in San Francisco, are surprising in view of rising protectionist sentiment in America. But we should not, he cautioned, expect a sudden wave of trade with the mainland regime.

Even if we do business with China, it will be fairly modest. U. S. trade with China went from $5 million in 1971 to $92 million in 1972 and may get past the $350 million mark this year, making us China's second largest trading partner after Japan.

"But that isn't a lot," Mahoney points out. "China's total external trade last year was only $2.5 billion, which is small for a major country."

Mahoney visited China last year to conduct negotiations to import ginger root, edible oils and Mao-Tai, a Chinese ceremonial drink. Based on his observations, he foresees increasing demand from China for American equipment and technology.

"The best markets seem to be in items which will help China move ahead — film processing equipment, Geiger counters, food processing equipment, computer technology, petrochemicals, fertilizer." Also, if rumors that China has great oil reserves prove true, drilling equipment, pipelines and refineries.

On the negative side, says Mahoney, there doesn't seem to be much of a market among the Chinese for cosmetics, fashions or luxury items like cars and jewelry. As for clothing, Chinese garb "is almost uniform, with slight variations in tone and color."

The long-term prospects for increased trade with China will be greatly influenced by a number of things, including the political future of Taiwan and the attitudes of the aging Mao Tse-tung's successors.

But the United States will do business with China, says Mahoney, because "we cannot afford to concede to our competitors a market that represents almost a quarter of the world's population."

"While this potentially significant market will take time to mature, and in spite of recent indications of rising prices in China, I am very enthusiastic about our initial prospects for trade."

Computers, petrochemicals, a high technology for ginger root, edible oils and Mao-Tai. Is there really that much cause for enthusiasm?

Now is the time to look over the spring seed catalogs to see what those giant whatchamacallits would have looked like if they had ever come up.

NO PLACE FOR HASTE

Too rapid action on environmental matters without evaluation of the consequences is dangerous in the extreme. Consider the matter of DDT.

Used worldwide to control such things as mosquitoes in malarial swamps, insect pests plaguing humans and animals and food crops alike, this chemical very likely did more than any other single agent in the history of the world to improve human life. Though no accurate estimate is possible, it probably saved hundreds of millions of lives that would otherwise have been lost to disease and starvation. Because of its chemical persistence, the use of DDT was banned virtually overnight.

What the ultimate consequences of this action may be cannot yet be assessed but one of them has cropped up in the northwestern part of the United States. In Eastern Oregon and Washington, 400,000 acres of timberland is being threatened by an infestation of the Douglas fir tussock moth.

The only man-made cure now known for the problem is a light application of DDT, amounting to only three quarters of a pound to the acre. Destruction of such a volume of timber would be an economic disaster, and there is every reason to expect that the tussock moth will, if not controlled, expand its area of operation even further. To what extent the destruction will spread, no one knows. The federal government may be asked to lift it ban on the use of DDT for this emergency.

Technology provides the tools to tip the scales in the balance of nature to man's favor. It is foolhardy to discard these tools before we have any effective substitutes for them.

If you've ever taken vitamins or paid a smidgen of attention to nutrition discussions, you've heard of Recommended Dietary Allowances. But do you know why we have RDA's, or who sets the standards.

Every five years the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences undertakes the monumental task of revising the RDA. The seventh edition was published in 1968, and the eighth will be published later this year.

The RDA serves a variety of purposes including use as a guide for the food industry, a check to counteract advertising errors, and a base for diets of welfare recipients. With the proposed changes in labeling of foods, the RDA is double important and, as always, anyone interested in eating a balanced diet will need correct nutrition information.

The RDA for a day is calculated to fill the needs of a "reference" man and woman. The man is considered to be 22 years old and weighs about 154 pounds. His physical activity is "light" (between sedentary and heavy activity). How many calories should be recommended for his daily intake? In 1963 it was 2,900 but in 1968 it was adjusted down to 2,800.

However, the problem is how many calories are needed to supply the required protein, vitamins, and minerals for good nutrition. How low can calorie intake be before nutrients become inadequate?

The Recommended Dietary Allowances are not requirements. They are a reference or a guide designed for practically everyone in the country. Therefore, they allow a margin of safety for individual variations which can be quite wide.

THE BALANCE SHEET

During hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission, at which representatives of the nation's railroads presented arguments for a 6 per cent rail freight rate increase, heavy emphasis was placed on plans for improving rail service. However, improved rail service hinges upon recognition of one hard truth. The railroads must generate the revenue — earn the money — before they can do the improving necessary to a strong U. S. transportation industry.

In response to an ICC request for evidence regarding efficiency of current railroad operations and plans for improvements in service, a rail spokesman testified, "Without the additional revenues, all railroads ... are going to have to prune programs, and if that becomes necessary, service will most certainly suffer."

Another rail spokesman outlined the high cost of improvement programs. A modern freight classification yard costs $25- to $50 million to build. One railroad estimates the cost at $23.5 million for the development of its transportation control data system. Still another representative of the industry, Dr. Burton N. Behling, vice president of economics and finance for the Association of American Railroads, describes the financial status of the industry in these words: "To say that the financial conditions in the railroad industry have worsened materially ... would be a gross understatement."

Today, the entire country is face-to-face with the balance sheet of U. S. railroad operations. The figures show that the rails have reached the end of the trail in absorbing inflationary cost increases and the panalties of archaic regulation. The quality of future service from this most essential element of the transportation industry depends upon how quickly the public and its designated agencies recognize that railroads must be paid a living wage the same as everyone else.

NATIONAL ENERGY
One of the most important factors in the future development of the United States is an adequate and reliable supply of energy in multiple forms at reasonable prices.

This requires domestic or secure source supply so as to negate undue foreign influence on U.S. foreign and domestic policies, international trade balances, and internal economic decisions. But it now appears that, in a few years, we will be importing one-half of our oil and gas, and running up a devastating $25 billion per year trade deficit while we do so.

The necessary first step in attacking our energy shortage problem is to have positive, constructive and coordinated government policies that give needed priority to the goal of national self-sufficiency. Thus, we should eliminate unrealistic government controls and revamp our system of taxation that sets mineral depletion rates below adequate levels.

Continued use of higher sulfur fuels should be allowed as long as reasonable standards for ground-level concentrations of sulfur oxides are not exceeded.

The regulatory and economic climate should encourage uranium mining and breeder reactors should be developed and research should be carried out on other new types of reactor as well as on nuclear fusion.

Oil shale extraction technology should be advanced, and the private development of electric power generation and transmission encouraged.

With government and industry working together, a better future for all could be assured.

As the man watched the millionaire drive by in his chauffeured limousine, he muttered: "But for me, there go I."

IT'S HIGH TIME ...

In California, a kind father named Rosenberg finally reached the limit of his endurance with his four teenagers and called a summit conference at breakfast. "From now on," he ruled, "you boys will wear decently short haircuts, no mustaches, no ridiculous beads or other offbeat costume. You will read no smutty literature and use no nasty language. You will address Mother as "Mother" and me as "Dad," and never again as "the Establishment" or "the Squares." You will help with the housework; you will mow lawns; you will wash cars; you will get jobs as grocery boys or as filling station helpers; you will stay home nights and do homework; and you will resume Sunday School and church attendance. You cannot appeal this. You will obey or I will clout the daylight out of you. If you doubt it, just try me."

The kids left the table, conferred, and sulked a while. Then at dinner, darned if they didn't all shake hands with "Dad" and hug "Mother." One of the happiest families in Los Angeles now.

ANOTHER FOLLY OF FOREIGN AID

For over a quarter of a century, the U.S. government has been conducting the most massive giveaway in the history of the world, best known as "foreign aid." Begun as an undertaking to rebuild war-shattered Europe, "foreign aid" long ago left behind that original justification. For many years it has seemed to have no justification other than perpetuating itself and its human bureaucracy.

Money was given outright to foreign governments, including many who made it a policy to insult the United States. Projects were undertaken which were of no use to the foreign country's people or to the U. S. Huge staffs of "aid" bureaucrats maintained on foreign soil were about the only beneficiaries.

Now comes a new climax of the handout urge. The hard-earned money of U. S. taxpayers was used to construct a $6 million building for the foreign Agency for International Development. Now the new building, just finished, is to be turned over to the Indian government for nothing.

Of course, this doesn't mean that the aid bureaucrats will find themselves out on the streets of New Delhi. They will go on using other quarters, also paid for by U. S. tax money, while the new building built expressly for them is turned over to the Indians.

When Washington expressed some doubts to U. S. Ambassador to India Daniel Moynihan that the whole building should be turned over, Moynihan fired back word that he would resign if they did not get every square foot of the structure. His resignation, and the recall of the entire AID bureaucracy in India, would be a step in the right direction. HLH.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Freidin to Chotiner:
Subject—Ed Muskie

WASHINGTON-- The chief target of President Nixon's political espionage before the 1972 conventions was Sen. Ed Muskie, D-Me., whose private conversations were often reported back verbatim to the White House.

The spy reports, prepared by newsmen Seymour Freidin, who was identified only as "Chapman's Friend," portrayed Muskie as a frenzied campaigner who berated his staff and bellyached to his Senate colleagues.

"He made Herculean efforts to control himself to avoid tantrums," stated an October 18, 1971, report. Yet the following February, Freidin reported that Muskie had to be restrained by his staff from barging into the offices of New Hampshire publisher William Loeb and "hauling him out by the scruff of the neck."

Freidin used his newspaper credentials to gain access to Democratic sources and then reported their off-the-record confidences to President Nixon's political mentor, Murray Chotiner. Confidential copies were distributed to then-Attorney General John Mitchell and White House staff chief H. R. Haldeman.

As early as April 6, 1971, Chapman's Friend reported on a stormy secret session of Muskie's planning staff.

"Muskie was in foul temper," declared the spy report. "He kicked things off by charging that his special entourage 'didn't know a g-d--- thing about politics....'"

The report quoted Muskie as complaining: "All I get from you people are excuses! You're not on the ball!" He questioned which team his advisers were on—"mine or someone else's?"

This brought a sharp rejoinder from his top adviser, Berl Bernhard. "Ed, he asked, 'do you want me to turn in my suit? If that's your intention, say so.'"

The report claimed Muskie dismissed talk of resignation but added plaintively: "You know how edgy a man in this situation can get...."

A few days later, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield was quoted in the press as saying Muskie was "slipping" in the presidential standings. Freidin gave the White House a report on Muskie's subsequent encounter with Mansfield.

MUSKIE'S COMPLAINT
"Mike, it seemed to us," complained Muskie, "that you were cutting ground from under me. This isn't being equal to everyone; I come out less equal."

Mansfield, according to Freidin, responded: "I'm neutral in this business. Everything that comes up shouldn't get under your skin, Ed. There's a long way to go."

Freidin quoted Muskie's press aide, Dick Stewart, as telling him on April 21, 1971: "This setup, as I find it now, is dirt on Muskie from his four married sisters. 'They live in a seems to be doing his own close thing... Muskie makes a date with someone. He either forgets it, doesn't tell anybody else and someone gets damned mad, cooling his heels.'"

This was confirmed by Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., who told Freidin: "Ed's got all kinds of problems. Staff is a big one for him...I guess that one of Ed's biggest worries is who is really working for him or against him in his own staff."

"SHMUSKIE"
Chapman's Friend also reported that the AFL-CIO had turned against Muskie. The spy reports contain this contemptuous comment from the AFL-CIO's Jay Lovestone: "Shmuskie finished himself for good with the Old Man (George Meany). Meany never cared for him anyway...Muskie got high and mighty. He'd make his own decisions and choices, he told our people. So we know what that meant. We took off all the wraps...Shmuskie got what was coming to him."

The reports depict Muskie as growing increasingly House spread distortions that frustrated over his political gave a false picture of me." No misfortunes until he finally one on his staff, he added, exploded. The cause was a could remember Freidin.

derogatory item about his wife, Jane, in William Loeb's Manchester, N. H., Union Leader. Afterward, Freidin relayed these off-the-record comments from Berl Bernhard: "Ed blew his stack. He called Loeb every name under the sun. He was all for going into the office and hauling him out by the scruff of the neck. There had to be lots of talking to get him to simmer down.... 'STEWED AND STORMED'"

"Even after he was convinced he could not roar into the Union Leader offices, he stewed and stormed. We decided after lots of phone talks that it was best for him to do the outside-the-building thing. But I don't believe any of us foresaw that he would become as emotional as he did."

Freidin flew to Maine in May 1971 to dig up possible dirt on Muskie from his four married sisters. "They live in a close radius near Mama Muskie," Freidin reported to Chotiner. "They are devoted to her and, in the course of their meal, spoke much more of Mama than they did of their famous brother."

One of the sisters, apparently, could use financial help. Chapman's Friend talked to Muskie's mother about it. "I wouldn't think of asking nor would my children..." she said. "My other daughters and I suggest to the whole family that if anyone should ever need help, we all pitch in. That doesn't single out anybody. Nobody has ever asked."

Concluded Freidin: "It was quite clear to me from Mama that the senator never gave any of them a quarter and they never asked him."

FOOTNOTE: Muskie told us that the White House spies had taken information out of context, distorted it and disseminated it as part of their 1971-72 campaign to eliminate him from the presidential race. "The pattern was clear," he said. "The White House spread distortions that frustrated over his political gave a false picture of me." No misfortunes until he finally one on his staff, he added, exploded. The cause was a could remember Freidin.

Victim of 'drunk driver' tells his story to public

Dear Ann Landers: Please, please don't let up in your efforts to put drunk drivers where they belong. In jail. I read this "Letter to the Editor" in the Oklahoma Times and actually wept. I hope you will print it, Ann. — A Faithful Fan Who Believes In You

Dear Fan: Here's the letter and I thank you for sending it on. I didn't weep but I got so mad I saw red.

Dear Editor: I'm the victim of a drunk driver who ran a red light in his Oldsmobile at high speed on October 19, 1970.

I was more dead than alive after several surgeons performed massive surgery to remove my ruptured spleen, and repair a kidney that had been severed. I also suffered a fractured skull, a broken collar bone, a broken left shoulder, nine broken ribs and a collapsed lung. They gave me 39 pints of blood. I was in the intensive care unit of St. Anthony's hospital for three weeks. Six doctors worked on me. None of them thought I would make it. When they discovered I had kidney failure they put me on the kidney machine. My hospital bills came to $3,000. I was stone broke, and had to go to the V.A. Hospital.

I have been on the kidney machine for two years and am unable to work. My wife had to take a job to support the family. We have three children.

I have not heard one word from the drunk who hit me. He has never said so much as "I'm sorry." He got off with a $100 fine and was sent to driver's school. The 30-day sentence was suspended.

I will be on the kidney machine for the rest of my life unless I can get a transplant. I can't play ball with my children. I can't work anymore. I am very bitter toward drunk drivers. Thanks for hearing my side. — William S. of Oklahoma City

Dear Ann Landers: Tell those clowns at Yale to move over. They've got hot competition. The students at Phillips Exeter are plotting some phony letters to you and they have some dillies in the works. There's a contest on to see who can get the first letter printed. One kid has three entries ready to go. The prize is a dinner for two at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

I don't consider myself a fink for cluing you because those cats are so cool you're sure to tumble. — Super Skull

Dear S. S.: Tell them, "Write on!" I'm ready when they are. Forewarned is forearmed.

Dear Ann Landers: What is wrong with a man who will not permit his wife to buy anything with flowers on it — such as a piece of upholstered furniture, a bedspread or a rug? He won't even let her hang a picture of a flower. He believes flowers are feminine and he doesn't want them around.

This same man comes across as a tough hombre, always looking for a fight. These oddities and what they might signify were being discussed in a small group the other night. Someone said, "Ask Ann Landers." So I'm asking. — Ah Sweet Mystery

Dear Sweet: What "mystery"? It's fairly apparent that this bird is unsure of his masculinity. What the poor fool doesn't know is that a real man is gentle and sensitive and appreciates the beauty of Confidential To Needing Help For A Youth Who Is Only Crippled Physically: Write to Closer Look, Box 1492, Washington, D.C. 20013. This splendid organization will send some superb literature. They do a great job.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers's guide to "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

PTAs meet, plan new programs

The Southeast Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association executive committee met Monday night to begin planning activities for the new year.

The first full PTA meeting will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. and the program will give parents a chance to visit rooms and meet teachers.

Membership chairmen will sign up members at the door.

Southeast Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association held its first meeting of the school year Monday night at the school and began planning new projects and introduced teachers.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. James Daugherty. Mrs. Louie Belt read minutes and the room count followed with Mrs. Warren Harber's second grade parents taking first place.

Mrs. John Scarbrough, project chairman, discussed new projects for the coming year, and Principal Jack Cothorn introduced the teachers.

Fourth graders speak up on how they should be treated

By SHAREN K. HUNT

University of Missouri Extension

Fourth grade school children may not be more "knowledgeable" than their parents, but they can express some pretty fundamental ideas on human relations.

Here's what a group of youngsters listed as a classroom assignment on how they wanted to be treated by their parents.

The ideas could be applied to adult relationships, employer-employee, teen-parent, and teacher-adult:

-- Don't always be giving orders. If you suggest instead of commanding it, I will do it faster.

-- Don't give me everything I ask for. Sometimes I just test you to see how much I can get.

-- Don't keep changing your mind. Decide what you want me to do and stick to it.

-- Keep promises - good and bad. Make sure you give me a reward, and if you promise a punishment, make sure I get that, too.

-- Don't compare me with anybody else, especially a brother or sister. If you make me out to be better, somebody gets hurt. If you make me out to be worse, then I get hurt.

-- Let me do as much for myself as I can. That's how I learn.

-- Don't correct my mistakes in front of other people. Tell me how to improve when nobody is around.

-- Don't scream at me. It makes me scream back, and I don't want to be a screamer.

-- Don't tell lies in front of me or ask me to tell lies to help you. I think less of you and less of myself.

-- When you are wrong about something, admit it. It won't hurt my opinion of you. It will make it easier for me to admit when I am wrong.

-- Treat me like you treat your friends. Then I will be your friend and you will be mine. Just because people are related does not mean they can't be polite to each other.

These thoughts were adapted from National Association of Manufacturers' program notes, March 1973.

A final message from Public Affairs Pamphlet: Parents can't be all things to all children. Being perfect takes so much energy that there's little left to spend on being human. Mistakes may be frequent, but crying over spilled milk is needless -- children are resilient and bounce back if they're on sound footing.

A sense of humor is quite helpful in weathering the storms of daily family life. As one husband advised, "It's important that we learn to laugh, cover and begin all over again."

SHS freshmen opener

Football action at Sikeston high school picks up

The Daily Standard,
Sikeston, Mo.
Tuesday,
September 25, 1973

this week with the junior varsity and freshmen getting into action.

The Bulldog's JV unit travels to Perryville Wednesday in hopes of avenging last Friday's 14-6 defeat at the hands of the Pirate varsity.

Freshman football will open in Sikeston this Thursday night after a 3-year lapse. The Bulldogs will meet the Perryville Pirates here in Sikeston. This will be the first game for both Freshman teams.

Freshman Head Coach George Hale said he thought this team had fine material and expected them to do very well this season. The Offensive lineup for the Bulldogs are

David Shell-Quarterback
Mark Heeb-Fullback
Larry Stricker-Tailback
Dale Deal-Powerback
Robert Grant-Center
Gary Griffin-Guard

Chaylon Couch-Guard
Wain Turpin-Tackle
Harry Irwin-Tackle
Paul Gilbow-End
Ken Standridge-End

With a few exceptions the Defensive team will remain the same as the Offensive team. The players that will play mainly on defense are Keith Stinson, Kevin Goetz, Preston Cook, Mike Boardman.

The Freshman Schedules for this year has five games listed. It starts off with Perryville this Thursday night here in Sikeston. October 9th, the Bulldogs play Cape Central, and October 11 they play Kennett in a eight and ninth grade double-header. The first away game comes October 25th when Sikeston travels to Poplar Bluff in another eight and ninth grade double-header. The final game of the season will be played at Charleston on November first.

Bootheel leaders

The area football season has just begun but, some strong defensive and offensive teams are already making themselves known. Although it is still too early to tell who are going to be the powerhouses in the area, four teams are still unscored upon, with two of those teams having amassed more than 60 points in two games. The Bootheel Division is once again being led by a strong Illmo-Scott City team. They have shut out their opponents and have scored 61 points. Their leading scorer is Richard Baker, who has 14 points and is second to Tim Odom of Doniphan.

The Northern Conference has two teams which have shown strong defensive units, namely Jackson and Charleston. Jackson has scored 62 points, which is the highest total in the area, and has not allowed a point to be scored against them. All-State star Loren Sides leads the offensive team with 18 points followed by Mark Jones with 12. Charleston, which won only one game last year, has also prevented the opposition from crossing the goal line. They have scored 41 points, of which 27 belong to J. J. Black, making him the leading scorer in the Conference and the area.

The Southern Conference boasts the final team to have shut out their opposition. Hayti has scored 31 points, which leads their division, and have proved to be too tough for their foes' offense. The leading scorer for the Indians is Danny White with 13 points. He is tied for second with Billy Gibson of Portageville, which is two points behind league leading Mitchell of Chaffee.

The following players have scored in their respective divisions: Bootheel Conference: Tim Odom, Doniphan Dons - 20; Richard Baker, Illmo-14; Steve Wadlington, Illmo-12;

Ralph Heisserer, Illmo - 12; Steve Donnell, Doniphan - 6; Tom Brumitt, Doniphan-6; Terry Blattell, Illmo-6; M. Short, Illmo-6; R. Bone, Illmo-6; Richard Springs, Illmo-5; Ricky Donnell, Doniphan-2.

Cards' best bet is third place

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A perplexed Red Schoendienst leaned back, propped a foot on his desk and admitted, "I don't know how to explain it. It's just unbelievable."

The manager of the fading St. Louis Cardinals was more than hard pressed to explain his team's fadeout in the stretch run of a drive for baseball's National League East Division title.

The Cards, who were off to a horrendous start, had overcome their dismal beginning with a midseason surge, sweeping them into first place in July.

The Cardinals stretched their lead to five games over the Chicago Cubs two weeks

ARE YOU SAVED?

Before you answer that question you should ask yourself - Saved from What? Or saved for what? Just being saved doesn't mean much unless we know what we are saved from. And if we are saved, then we should have something mighty good to look forward to.

THE KINGDOM OF JESUS is a book that tells in simple readable English - why we should be saved - what it takes to be saved and what we have to look forward to if we are saved.

Studying it can change your whole life for you. The Message of Jesus is as meaningful today as it was when He gave it to His Apostles 2,000 years ago.

Why don't you find out what Jesus means to you. Fill out the coupon below and you'll receive your introduction to The Kingdom of Jesus.

later, then began an unremitting slide following an injury sidelining Bob Gibson for the remainder of the season.

With only six games remaining, their best hope appeared to be for third place, ahead of the Cubs, whom they entertain tonight, and the slumping Montreal Expos.

"Even though you like to do better, we were pleased to come back from such a poor start," said Schoendienst, whose team lost 23 of its first 31 games.

"But after we got in first place, I thought we could stay there," he said. "This is the year when a division title was up for grabs. We had opportunities. There's no question about that."

Gibson, whose record was 11-10, suffered a knee injury Aug. 4 against the New York Mets and underwent surgery for repair of torn ligaments four days later.

A day after the injury, the Cards swept a twinbill from the Mets, but since then have won only 15 of 45 games, totalling from first place Sept. 13.

Two later victories in Montreal placed them 1½ games back, but four defeats in five games against the Philadelphia Phillies and Mets have left them on the edge of the cliff.

"Every time we had Gibson pitching, every fourth or fifth day, it saved the rest of our staff," Schoendienst said, in partial explanation. "He could usually pitch a complete game."

"I don't think that he'll pitch this week," said Schoendienst, whose team finishes against the Cubs and Phillies, "but I really don't know."

"He was just pitching good, too," Schoendienst said. "He really likes it when the race is tough, and that's the way this race has been."

Big Red upset formula

ST. LOUIS (AP) — No special strategy, unique tactics or fancy game plan accounted for the St. Louis Cardinals' 34-27 upset of the Washington Redskins Sunday.

"We used our normal offense and defense. We just played good football," rookie Coach Don Coryell told a cheering St. Louis Quarterback Club, which had little to applaud during two straight 4-9 seasons.

"The only thing we stressed before the game was that we couldn't commit the turnover. And we didn't have a fumble or pass interception," Coryell told some 300 members of the fan club in his post-game synopsis Monday.

"We didn't change anything offensively or defensively," he said. "The biggest mistake you can make sometimes is to add new wrinkles, to change. But we had confidence in our ability."

In addition to avoiding turnovers, Coryell admitted that he felt if St. Louis could stop Washington's ground attack and force the Redskins to throw, his club would have a chance.

Although the Redskins picked up 301 yards passing, the Cardinal defense thwarted their ball control efforts by holding them to 69 yards on the ground.

Tight end Jackie Smith, who set up several St. Louis scores with five catches for 129 yards, and tackle Bob Rowe, who spearheaded the defensive unit, also spoke at the Quarterback Club gathering.

"It was a combination of luck, mostly," Smith said of his instrumental receptions on long passes from quarterback Jim Hart. "We just happened to have the right pass play for the type of defense they were in. The plays might not have worked if they had been in a different defense."

"Spotters in the press box were getting the information to us so quickly that we were able to take advantage of it on the next play, instead of waiting until the next series. A lot of times it was an educated guess that paid off," Smith said.

The veteran tight end also had praise for Hart, who hit on 17 of 28 attempts for 286 yards; the defense, for holding the Washington ground attack, and the play of running backs Donny Anderson and rookie Terry Metcalf.

"Donny's probably having his finest season," Smith said of Anderson, who scored three touchdowns to boost his season's total to a league leading six. "And I told Metcalf that if he ever got hurt, that I'm going to retire."

Metcalf grabbed six Hart passes for 78 yards Sunday after rushing 133 yards in his pro debut the previous week in the Cardinals' 34-23 triumph over Philadelphia.

The Cardinals' next test will come against the Cowboys in Dallas next Sunday.
